The 2016 Salon du Cheval de Paris will include a space dedicated to animal well-being and health. Organised by the French Veterinary Association and addressing a complete range of subjects (health, feed, stabling, behaviour, the musculoskeletal system, and care) this space is targeted at horse riders, breeders, teachers, owners and people who are simply passionate about horses. You can also sit in on 'clinics' run by professional ethologists and take part in hands-on exercises to gain a practical insight into the issues covered.

- Ethological horse riding consists in interacting with your horse while taking into account its psychological traits. The goal is to successfully achieve the behaviour you want without limiting your horse. This practice, which enables your horse to obey without mistreatment, is increasingly used by major international horse riders. From preparation to the competition and the improvement of a horse's performance, this know-how gives each rider the possibility to make technical progress, and improve their knowledge and understanding of their horse. This natural method that has revolutionised traditional horse riding by allowing horse riders to form a new relationship with their mount relies on mutual understanding, patience and respect.

- The AVEF (French Veterinary Association) organises a meeting area and run several workshops to help you better understand issues around your horse's feed, musculoskeletal system, behaviour, rhythms and attitudes. Every day, you can take part in events on the stand that aim to present the role and work of a horse vet. They are able to advise on breeding, competitions and leisure activities. You can see, try out and touch new medical and surgical technologies....
